Sun shines on a run with a cause

Elouise Joseph joins hands Sunday with other racers, above, in a "movement choir," and, at right, Gina Delfino stretches during an aerobic exercise session before the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure in San Francisco. The 13th annual event, which benefits agencies that aid women with breast cancer, was held for the first time at Crissy Field. The San Francisco race, with more than 8,000 participants, including many breast cancer survivors, is one of more than 100 held across the country. Participants, who raise money through sponsors, turned out in pink caps, shirts and pants for the 5 kilometer run. The event is expected to raise $1.2 million.
